OUR WATER POWER

While there are so many conflicting views as to the extent of our present water power and the most feasible manner of utilizing it for manufacturing purposes, it seems to us that the City Government has taken the very wise step in authorizing the Water Board to employ some expert engineer of established reputation to survey the dam and power and report fully just what we now have at Treat's Falls and how it may be advantageously developed.

In selecting the person to be intrusted with this important duty the Water Board will of course seek some eminent specialist in the field of hydraulic engineering who has had and will have no interest in the matter of ours save to give it a faithful examination and a truthful and unprejudiced report upon which our community can confidently rely.

Our city has made a large investment and our people are naturally anxious that if some proper means may be found if possible of utilizing any surplus power there may be beyond what will be needed for the most liberal and unstinted supply of our city for all useful purposes. The first step in this direction is to procure an authoritative and scientific examination of the whole subject upon which our City Government can proceed intelligently in whatever direction may prove expedient.

It is a matter in which every citizen has an interest and its consideration should be divested of the acrimony of past differences and controversies. While we look for the present and the future to do that which may best promote the welfare of the whole community.

THE PACIFIC BANK

THE INSTITUTION TURNED OVER TO THE DIRECTORS—A FAVORABLE OUTLOOK.

After having been for two months contemplating the Pacific National Bank Colossus, Needham yesterday delivered the last to the Directors. The advantage to the Bank of this change is easily understood. As Bank Examiner Col Needham could make no actual settlement of claims, nor deliver or exchange no securities he could be subject to negotiations which would be of advantage to the bank in winding up our paper. While in charge of the bank however Col Needham and the Directors have succeeded in bettering to a good extent in money value of its city $750 000. It should in justice be said that the stockholders and depositors of the bank are in a large measure indebted to Col Needham for his vigorous and intelligent management of affairs. Had not been for his prompt and efficient action taking charge of the wreck and bringing order out of chaos, the bank would today have been in the hands of a receiver and preparing to pay a certain number of cents on a dollar.

The Directors on taking charge of the bank for a few days before it will be ready to commence business have furnished a bond of $200 000 signed by Lewis Pulsifer and the other as sureties, to the entire satisfaction of the Bank Examiner, and have in their possession a note for $100 000 on which good paper in possession of the bank is collateral. A week's careful examination will put the bank on a sound footing. Most of the large creditors have agreed to take their deposits in satisfactory at the end of three, six and twelve months, respectively. Claims of $100 and less will be paid at sight when the books are opened for business. It is satisfactory for the welfare of the bank that all the large creditors should agree to the arrangement mentioned above. Under such terms can the bank safely resume business at once. The efforts of the Directors during nine weeks of unremitting work have made a success of what seemed a hopeless undertaking, and they are entitled to all due credit for their great labor. Out of what seemed to be the most complete ruin brought about by a wanton and reckless management has been saved in round numbers about $1 300 000 more than was thought possible.

An application for admission to the Clearing House has not yet been made and until it should be favorably acted upon it will hardly be worth while for the bank to resume business. To secure admission to the bank application must first be in writing to the Clearing House Committee, and then two-thirds or three fourths vote of the bank represented at the meeting acting upon the question. It is not believed among bank officers that there will be any opposition to the admission of the new member to the Association when the Examiner shall certify that it is in good condition.—Boston Journal Jan 18.

The Lewiston Journal says that the article recently appearing in the Boston Globe relative to the Maine Insane Asylum and attributed to Mrs Quimby of Augusta, one of the trustees of the Asylum was not published by her. The Journal says the author is a woman and her residence is Boston. She was introduced to Mrs. Quimby some time ago as the secretary of an organization called the National Association for the Protection of the Insane. A correspondence was the result. Questions were asked by this lady, as if by authority, concerning the inside workings of the Hospital and they were answered in the freedom of confidence. When the Hospital interviews commenced this lady made herself quite prominent but as her views appeared to have little weight she soon returned to Boston and from that time to this has shown bitterness. Recently she has threatened publishing Mrs Q's letters, and has now published this article, containing some things Mrs Q wrote, and many which she did not write, and the whole is wretchedly garbled.

In the New York Tribune of Wednesday Thomas M Nichol styles "the Friend of President Garfield," whose recent letter appeared in the New York Herald, "a fraud liar and thief."

A Washington special says it is stated that the House Judiciary Committee has determined to divide the balance of the Geneva award between the war premium men and those who were damaged by the confederate cruisers. The balance of the award is about $12 000 000.

Gen W. D Murphy has sued W H English, of Indiana, the late Democratic candidate for Vice President, for $1 180 for speeches he delivered in Indiana in behalf of the Democratic ticket, and for which he has received no pay, notwithstanding the fact as he says, that English promised it.

THE CONNECTICUT MUTUAL'S REAL ESTATE. The Hartford Courant of January 12 says: During the year 1881 the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company has sold for $965 922 57 real estate costing it $839,859 02, and valued by the commissioner in 1879 at only $764 334 96, the gain over cost being $126 063 55, or 15 per cent., and the gain over the commissioner's valuation being $201,587.65, or 26 3-10 per cent. The company's predictions concerning its property have begun to have abundant fulfillment.

ANECDOTES OF WEBSTER.

A gentleman in this city who has always been an ardent admirer of Daniel Webster sends us some interesting notes from his scrap-book that will be new to most of our readers.

An amusing incident happened to Mr. Webster just after his Hayne speech. For the purpose of a little relaxation, Mr. Webster went into Virginia with some friends. They called at a farm house and asked for some milk and water to drink. The good woman of the house went to get some. Her husband, who had been intently reading a newspaper containing Mr. Webster's speech, asked Mr. W—— "Do you know Webster?" "Yes, I believe I do," was the reply. "Well, how does he look?" "Rather savage," said Mr Webster, "they say he looks like me." "Well, are you Webster?" "Yes, they say I am, and I suppose it is so." By this time the wife came in with the milk and water. "Carry that back, carry that back" said the husband. "This is Daniel Webster. Make a pitcher of hot toddy, nothing but hail storm will do for Webster."

Chas A Stetson, formerly of the Astor House, says, "When Mr Webster came from Washington after the Baltimore Convention, (in 1852) I thought him feeble and unwell, and after some conversation with him in relation to business and politics, I left him. Late in the day as I came round the corner of the entry-way near his room, he was standing alone. I walked up to him and put my hand upon his breast, and said to him "I hope all is right here." "Yes sir" he replied, "I am too near God to have a single heart-burning against a human creature on earth, but I have a chagrin as profound as my entire nature, and it is, that after having performed my duty to my Southern brethren, they have not the courage or kindness to place me on the record of that convention. I do not say I did not want the nomination, but I would rather have had their record than the nomination."

As the specimen of his manly energy, when roused, was shown in that notable speech in the Senate in which a Senator from New York was the target of his denunciation.

"No power known to man, not even hydrostatic pressure, can compress so big a volume of his into so small a space, as his Senator has uttered in a speech which he is even now franking all over the country."

He said it with such intonations, that one of his hearers declared that he felt, all the night afterwards, as if a heavy cannonading was resounding in his ears. In the fury of that moment he flung papers from one which he had referred to, half across the Senate chamber in merely attempting to lay them down.

Webster was notoriously careless about money. After continued provocation, he once wrote a letter to the editor of a newspaper which referred to his private affairs and especially to his not paying his debts.

It is true that I have not always said my debts punctually, and that owe money. One cause of this is, that I have not pressed those who owe me for payment. As an instance of this, I enclose you a check which I made some thirty years ago for money I lent him to educate his boys.

The wedded couple received congratulations and departed on the 3.30 train for Washington, D C, where they will spend the honey moon.

NEW MAGAZINES

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for February is already before us, more brilliant than ever. Nothing could excel the principal steel plate Fast Canvas, or the sparkling story it illustrates. The colored pattern in Kensington stitch, Design For Pansies, is one of those costly things found only in Peterson. The literary matter is even better than usual. Both the novelets that by Mrs Stephens and that by Mrs Austin increase in power as they go on. The other stories are all superior, those by Frank Lee Benedict and Mrs Demerritt especially so. The illustrations of fashions, for work table patterns, etc, etc, number near fifty and are alone worth the price of the number. The prices but two dollars a year with great deductions to clubs. Specimens are sent, gratis, if written for, to those wishing to get clubs. Address Charles J Peterson, 300 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CONTINUATION OF SCOVILLE'S ARGUMENT.

CASE NOT LIKELY TO REACH THE JURY

BEFORE NEXT WEDNESDAY.

An Appeal

WASHINGTON, Jan 19 As soon as the Judge's seat he delivered himself of a long speech with a pompous rhetorical effect "The decisions of New York Court of Appeals are in force at the present moment I desire to call attention to a decision of a great force from the Empire State and old state of the Republic I state that sends forth the brains and the resources of the Nation I come forward in the law of in Rhode to the law has been that the killing of a man on the defendant, but the Court of Appeals with grand magnanimity put the burden of proof is on this point of the law that the man not only killed the act but also that he killed the act he committed it In the name of Justice In the name of the people and in the name of the Judiciary I desire to thank the Court of Appeals of the State of New York

Scoville then resumed his argument in the evidence of several witnesses that at the depot and saw the shooting of Guiteau's arrest of Gunt He was trying to show that the prisoner was insane at the time of the act in accordance with the law laid down in Scoville complained that he had failed to call Mr Hirsch to the stand and the prosecution was because his evidence would have been of service to the

"Well I had a man who was insane Do you wanted to prove it? He was the person stand on the stand Now we had up on the stand a man who worked with McFirsch and person to tell what he did and you get all excited from him

Scoville replied read from the evidence of witness in order to allow him to speak with him all the way to the jail

Scoville added, this is a sufficient answer to your last remark and a sufficient answer why we should complain that you prevented us of this very material evidence which would have shown the physical and mental condition so far as Guiteau's act was concerned

Judge Cox Will you let the conversation pass or at the very time of about

Scoville Then why didn't you summon the witness

Judge Cox Inquiringly and public respectfully

Scoville Is that the manner was

Judge Cox I ask the question don't

Scoville I want an inquiry to scare

Judge Cox Is one can be easily scared on

Scoville I can read from various letters written by Guiteau at the hearing and in which he alleged insanity and argued the act was not a murder but a mere impossibility for a sane man to do such a cruel act for no blood thirsty motive

Scoville Guiteau wrote and talked as to his insanity in relation to it. Scoville concluded the attention of the jury to the fact that he charged that the prisoner had before charged that the prisoner upon the first two weeks of his trial They had extracted from interviews with the prisoner and produced as evidence just what they would and have produced to the jury the prisoner but accepting And provided for the worst provided actually in

Judge Cox (continued) But accidentally I might add we have the evidence of witnesses Scoville I will say the prosecution in their final argument to the jury to show that it was not the act of the jury to claim that we have a right to take all these things into consideration

Judge Cox They came to my aid and I draw me out and I talked with you a little I told them about the Deity and my inspiration and now they suppose that evidence That shows the delicacy he proved to God and God Almighty will be every one on this prosecution in my

After a little pause the prisoner The remark made me to say that Judge Cox has been pretending to be sick for days at I hope it will be providential and that he will be sick I hope the Lord will not let him follow quick and then send for me

Then proceeded Corkhill made the speaker evidently making comments until finally he turned upon the Court and pronounced in scathing language the prisoner and which he intercepted and which he thought might benefit the defendant and Scoville, which was permitted in a Court of Justice upon the trial of a civil suit (— sneering) — That is your family it amounts to nothing as a — Well let it be my opinion, I am entitled to one and so is the

— was a friendly allusion to Mr Arthur that he cut out the meat.

Scoville continued the counsel for the prosecution frequently interrupted him

Judge Cox Let me suggest to you the occasion Corkhill explained to you you course you were not in the trial

Judge rather contemptuously Oh! I just making a little capital before the jury

Scoville Yes I am making a little capital

Judge Cox Well please make it quick

Scoville continued, I am making a little capital here and a little there and I am trying it as fast as I can properly get over the ground

The speaker disclaimed as his main motive the desire to shield this man for the honor of the Guiteau family. If, however he could by his efforts stay this mob madness which could rush to the scaffold the same man—that mob spirit which Day had so lauded—if he could stay the violence until reason and judgment interposed to the consideration of this case then would his accomplish what was of more account and save the American Nation and posterity from the disgrace of trying to the gibbet an insane man

Scoville then proceeded, apparently gaining the same ground he had once before traversed to show that the prisoner was not responsible and his improper said Scoville, "with the telegraph and all the power of the Government at his back if there had been a single or immaterial or vicious act on the part of the prisoner during the six years he was in the Oregon Community, this prosecution would have produced the witnesses to show it." The counsel for the prosecution continually badgered the speaker who as frequently digressed from his argument to respond and as a consequence the thread of his discourse was often broken.

It was a matter of some difficulty at times to detect any logical sequence in the argument. Alluding to the evidence of Dr North the speaker charged "this was another instance of the unfairness of the District Attorney. Without the slightest evidence or reason for so doing he had asked the witness Were you ever indicted for crime? and witness had responded quietly and frankly, No sir, and I never expect to be.

Corkhill—"It happened to know the man and he should not thus gratuitously insult him."

Corkhill—"Well I tried him in the Court once. I remembered his face when he took the stand and I found after wards that he was here on an appeal from the police court.

As the audience laughed at this point scored by the District Attorney Mrs. Scoville became very angry and complained in audible tones of the District Attorney's "meanness", as she termed it.

The hour of recess having arrived Scoville decided for a moment with Judge Cox as to how long a recess should be ordered. The audience began to arise and Guiteau flopped easily called out, "Your Honor, we are waiting on you, ain't you going to announce a recess?"

At this the Crier raised a laugh by calling out, "well come along, we'll have a recess"

After Recess

Scoville continued a review of the evidence and claimed the prisoner had been free, frank and outspoken in all things. If at he had conversed at the jail with every one that the prosecution had sent there, and always without reserve. Had he been sane and playing a part, he would no have done so Commenting upon, as he claimed absence of motive on Guiteau's part, Scoville said, "You can't find an instance in history, you can't suppose A case where a man forty years of age, who never before committed a crime, whp never had an hour associated with criminals or bad people, who on the contrary always sought the society not only of but of Christian people, you can't conceive of such man's committing such an act without a motive. Nothing but the theory of insanity can possibly account for such an act as Guiteau's" Scoville then discussed the assumption that Guiteau might be actuated by a desire for revenge and argued the improbability of such an assumption from the fact that if any ground for ill-will existed on Guiteau's part, it was against Secretary Blaine and according to the inexorable laws of the mind it would have been executed against him "If there can't possibly be shown any ill-will on his part toward President Garfield"

Corkhill, You seem to forget he killed him

Without noticing this comment Scoville next took up the hypothesis that the crime was committed from an overpowering desire for notoriety, and claimed the story failed to point out a case where such a crime was committed purely and simply from such a motive and it was incompatible with reason and impossible for the human mind to conceive of such a motive as sufficient to induce any sane man to commit such a crime. That he killed he President as a disappointed office seeker is for said he so modest over some wrong of this kind something of his disappointment would crop out the wound have said something in his intercourse with other people indicating his disappointment or bad temper on the subject Nothing would have been more natural in the interval before he had made up his mind to kill the President" Scoville alluded to the "taunt" of the prosecution that the experts for the defence had gone back on them, and said an explanation when he reached Washington did not know the name of a single expert He knew Guiteau was crazy, but how to show it to the country and convince the jury of his countrymen was a burden that pressed upon him. Then from Dr Worcester, that little man from the great State of Massachusetts, the state that holds the Athens of America He wrote if he knew what was said of Guiteau was run he was crazy, that he (Worcester) had great experience in treating insanity and had written a book which was accepted and authority He said further he wanted to do all he could to save the Nation from the disgrace of hanging an insane man, even if his victim happened to be the President of the United States I felt and Scoville, a great weight lifted from my heart I thought here I a — Great and Good Man who can't be bought Well gentlemen this very little man from the great State of Massachusetts came"

Came a Letter

Guiteau—He wanted a free ride to Washington He got here and Corkhill bought him up so he went back on that letter

Scoville severely criticised the course of Worcester and classed him with "the Government conspirators." Adjourned.

The Case not to Reach the Jury Before Next Wednesday

It is understood the defence will at the conclusion of Scoville's speech renew the motion to allow the prisoner to address the jury and will ask to be heard in support of the motion The effect of this if permitted by the Court will be to consume another day. Allowing two days for Judge Porter and it is more than probable he will require three the case will hardly get to the jury before Wednesday next.

General News.

Mr Blaine's Dinner Party.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 Ex-Secretary Blaine gave a notable dinner party this evening. Among the guests were President Arthur, Gov. Leland Stanford of California, British Minister Sackville-West, Gen. Sherman Gen. Hancock, Senator Hale, Henry James, the novelist, Thorndike Rice, editor of the North American Review, Miss Halstead, Andrew Carnegie and Geo. Bancroft.

DRIVEN FROM HOME.

10,000 PEOPLE FLOODED OUT.

NASHVILLE, Tenn, Jan 19 The floods here reached a climax last evening with an additional two feet rise Nearly all the principal streets are covered and the trains on three different railroads have stopped running. The city is surrounded by water on three sides Efforts are being made to succor those who have been driven from their homes by the back water. Many have suffered for want of shelter and food. It is estimated that not less than 10,000 people have been forced to abandon their homes which are submerged. It is impossible to estimate the losses. Some 1500 or 2000 houses are under water. The health officer will not permit the return of the people to their houses until they shall have been thoroughly dried out.

In South East Nashville the people are almost completely cut off from the main portion of the city One lumber company has lost a great deal of lumber. Dwelling houses and cribs are floating down the river but as fast as can be ascertained, no one has been drowned All the steamers have tied up here because they could not make landings. Immense damage to houses, crops etc., has been sustained below Nashville

Later

The rivers still rising slowly and is now within two feet of the rise of 1847 A large amount of money was raised to day and committees appointed to superintend the issuance of provisions to indigent sufferers

MAINE NEWS.

Ex Gov Conner Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. The Senate confirmed Selden Connor to be Pension Agent at Augusta.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS—First Session

Senate,

WASHINGTON, Jan 19 On motion of Mr Davis, of Illinois a bill to permit Judge Hunt, of the Supreme Court, to retire, was passed 41 to 14

The President pro tem submitted the response of the Secretary of the Interior to the resolution of the 12th inst inquiring as to the lapsing of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad and in connection therewith as to the action of ex Secretary Schurz, &c. Referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

The bill to permit Justice Ward Hunt of the Supreme Court, to retire was taken up and after a short debate passed—yeas, 41, nays, 14. The consideration of the Sherman Funding Bill was then resumed and Mr. Windom proceeded to oppose the bill as unnecessary, experimental and likely to involve the Government in loss. He regarded the credit as in a better state with the entire $850 000 000 payable any time at the option of the Government a 3½ per cent than it would be with 200 000,000 payable a the end of five years at 3 per cent

Mr. Hill, of Georgia, said there was no such thing in existence as a 3½ per cent bond and charged that the action of Mr Windom, as Secretary of the Treasury, in continuing 4 and 6 per cent. bonds at 4½ per cent was usurpation of legislative functions, and that any arrangement between the Executive Department and the creditors of the Government, which changed any term of bonds issued by authority of law, was void.

Mr. Windom admitted there was no such thing as a 3½ per cent bond in law. The bondholders simply took a piece of paper with an indorsement upon it; they would not ask more than 3½ per cent. interest and would waive the other ½ per cent. Nothing had either been added or subtracted from the bond, but the Government simply let it run on and the holder agrees to relinquish interest in excess of 3½ per cent

Mr Hill—Suppose one of the holders of the bonds come in now and demands his 5 or 6 per cent, could he get it?

Mr Windom—I think not.

Mr. Hill—Why not?

Mr Windom—He has relinquished all over 3½ per cent for a good and valuable consideration, namely permission to continue his bond at a time when the Government could pay it off

Mr Hill—When did the Government have $500 000 000 with which to pay off the 5 and 6 per cent bonds?

Mr Windom—It did not have enough to pay $500,000 000 but did have enough to pay each man's $1 000 bond as presented

The bill was laid aside informally. Adjourned.

House

Bills were reported from the Committee on Claims to refund to the State of Georgia certain moneys contributed by that State for the common defence in 1877, and to reimburse Massachusetts for certain expenditures for the coast defences

The House resumed the consideration of the report of the Committee on Rules increasing the membership of several committees Mr. Belford suggested that all members be assigned alphabetically to the committees on Ways and Means and of Appropriations, fall down to the letter "N" going to the former and the rest to the latter, and he would propose that every member be allowed one clerk and two boot blacks (Laughter.)

Mr Randall doubted that small committees were a public interest and large committees not, influences were more easily brought to bear on a few members than on many.

A discussion followed between Messrs. Randall, Robeson, Bowman and Briggs when the latter in response to a query by Mr Randall as to what remedy was proposed to ensure prompt consideration of the bill, replied, stop this everlasting talk and go to work.

After further debate Mr Joyce moved to recommit the report and all pending amendments to the Committee on Rules; agreed to—yeas, 159, nays, 99

The Speaker presented several messages from the President in connection with Indian and army matters. Referred.

Mr. Spooner of Rhode Island, regretted that one of the earliest duties devolved upon him was the announcement of the death of the late Senator Burnside and on his motion Monday next at three o'clock was assigned for eulogies to his memory Adjourned.

MAINE TELEPHONE COMPANY

A Change in the Executive Board

The Portland Press says that the rapid growth of the telephone business throughout the country, and the interchange of telephone business has proven—in the opinion of many—that it is for the best interest of all concerned, both subscriber and stockholder, that a large amount of territory should be manipulated under one management With this end in view a number of gentlemen interested heavily in Massachusetts and New Hampshire companies have purchased the entire stock of the National Bell Telephone Company of the State of Maine—as previously reported—consummating the trade on Saturday last This company has for the past twenty months been under the able management of Mr C B Gardner, president, and Mr Frank J. Rollins, treasurer and secretary, who from a mere nominal business have in this brief period connected with exchanges over 1300 subscribers in the large cities and towns of the State in addition to the building of several trunk lines between important points. The result of the purchase above mentioned necessitated a change in the executive board of the Maine company who at a meeting held in Boston, Wednesday, elected the following officers

President—W A Ingham, Lowell.
Treasurer—Charles J. Glidden Lowell
Secretary—Frank J. Rollins, Portland
General Manager—Loren N. Lowins Portland

Directors—Messrs W A Ingham C J Glidden, L N Downs Henry M. Bacon and John F Kimball of Lowell, Theo. N Vail and O E Madden of Boston.

It is the intention of the new management to carry on the business in the manner that it has been conducted heretofore The gentlemen making his purchase may ultimately consolidate with the Maine company, the Bay State Telephone of 1,700 subscribers operating Lowell, Worcester, and Fitchburg, Mass, the Granite State Telephone Company, of 350 subscribers, operating Manchester, N H, and several smaller companies Lines will be built the coming season connecting all the larger cities and towns of the State with points in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, and the time is not far off when a citizen in Portland will be enabled to converse freely with a citizen in New York

There being a report on the street that all the seats in the house were sold, we are requested to state that many desirable seats are still unsold. The audience are requested to be in their seats at a quarter before eight, as, owing to the length of the programme, the performance must begin promptly at that hour.

Stereopticon Talks.

Quite as interesting as the very instructive lecture on Paris, Tuesday evening was that delivered last night on "Venice Milan and the Italian Lakes" The views presented were superb and the descriptions clear and at times eloquent. The greater part of the lecture was devoted to Venice and a brief but very comprehensive history of the city, past and present, was given. Venice, although still beautiful, presents to the visitor many scenes that fill the heart with sadness. Once boasting a population of 200,000 and possessing great wealth which had been gained by conquest, the city now numbers but about 126,000, a very large proportion of whom are steeped in the most wretched poverty The apparent neglect, the crumbling of historic palaces, the scenes of misery combine to detract from the beauty of Venice when viewed by day, but beneath the soft blue sky of an Italian moonlight, the scene becomes one of enchantment. The contrast was vividly illustrated by two superb stereopticon views showing Venice by day and Venice by night. The grand cathedral at Milan, which from its foundation to the summit of the central tower is of pure white marble, was present in series of magnificent views. Besides the central tower which reaches far into the heavens, there are ninety-eight lesser towers, each of which is surmounted by life-like statues in white marble. The cathedral is the chief attraction and the glory of Milan. The evening closed with a tour of the Italian lakes. Mr. Eagan received frequent and merited applause, both for Church vs Collins The testimony in this case was closed last night, and this forenoon the case was ably presented to the jury by Mr. Varney for the defendant and Mr. Davis for the plaintiff, each in an argument occupying one hour and a half. After a clear and impartial charge by the Chief Justice the jury retired at twelve o'clock.

At quarter-past five the second jury came in and reported that they were unable to agree on a verdict in Church vs. Collins, and were discharged from the case.

James H Burgess vs Clement C Libby. The parties reside in the town of Corinna The plaintiff is an attorney and counsellor at law. The defendant was collector of taxes for said town from and including 1876 to and including 1879, and this action was brought to recover $88 00 for advice and professional services in the settlement of a matter between the defendant and the town of Corinna growing out of the aforesaid collectorship.

The defence is first that the plaintiff was not employed in relation to some of the items charged in his bill, and secondly, upon the evidence and the law it should appear that he was employed, then his charges are too high

Mr Burgess made a very clear opening of his case to the jury, claiming that he performed valuable services for the defendant.

THE BAY AND THE WATER WORKS

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

In a previous article in your paper I said that the City of Bangor had no deed nor any legal title to the shore on which the west end of the dam now rests, nor to land on which he building for the Water Works now stands There is no mistake in this statement A correspondent in your paper of Saturday under the signature of "C" says "J C" is labouring under a mistake, but fails to point out wherein C states the contrary in the same article he confirms my statement and if further confirmation is necessary it appears in a copy of a paper printed in the WHIG of Tuesday signed by Thomas N. Egery and others In regard to this last-mentioned paper it is confined to some notice. What is his paper, and what is meant by it, and what does it amount to? It is certainly not a bond, nor a deed, nor a contract It is not under seal, was never executed by the city, nor accepted by them so far as appears. In my opinion it has no pecuniary value to the city. It is an indefinite memorandum, and as such could never be enforced in a court of law or equity, for the simple reason that there is no one to enforce it and nothing to enforce Observe the language

"All a dam is built connecting with the west side of the Penobscot river north is "than seven feet above mean high tide on "either of said farms, and will be far "wished"

"It now or within ten years said dam is "built high enough not only to furnish "power for pumping but also to run the "mills we agree to furnish all the land" etc.

It does not say without further cost to the city, nor make mention of any specified sum which the city shall pay for such furnishing It may be all right, but it looks —I do not say that it is so, I only say that it looks very much as if somebody had an eye to the future, as thus Gives us your surplus water and we will give you a deed, otherwise no water, no deed How hand some and satisfactory it would to the community if the Water Company or the owners of the shore and land would give a good warranty deed to the city of so much as they necessarily require for the use of the Water Works, and then ask to use the surplus water. It seems to me that there need be no hurry to incur the expense of an engineer to measure the water until a title is first had to it I the owners do not at once convey to the city so much as is required for the dam and works, then the same may be appraised under section 4 of the original charter If this is done, in order to make all sure and safe I would most respectfully suggest that application be made to the Legislature for an act to equalize all the blunders and mistakes connected with the building of the dam and Water Works from the beginning to the present time The Legislature will have no hesitation in granting it, taking as a precedent the act granted some years since which was then and may be again called a "Healing Plaster Act." FISH CULTURE AT ORLAND

Among the interesting local attractions at this place are the salmon works, or hatching house, on the northeast side of Great Pond, near the house of Mr. Thomas Partridge. These works have become a sort of fixture. For a series of years salmon have been brought from the salt water and deposited in an enclosure in Dead brook, which has been fitted up for this purpose Extra pains have been taken the past season to improve the spawning ground for the salmon during their summer visit to the fresh water. The number taken last year was 519. The usual casualities have been less than the average for the past. 327 females were stripped, obtaining 2½ millions of eggs which were conveyed to the hatching house about two miles distant.

This work was done the last week of October and the month of November. This has been a place of unusually activity the past season. Until this winter the stream (which is the outlet of Craig's Pond) has supplied the water for the hatching troughs. Finding it warmer than was desirable, a plan was devised for obtaining the water directly from the pond. Hence a ditch was dug, 100 rods long, below the first, at the bottom of which a cement aqueduct was laid, having a bore of 4 inches in diameter.

At present the hatching house is supplied with cold and warm water, so arranged that either can be used at a minute's notice. If the water is too warm, the other too cold the golden mean comes by running both together, rather. It would be superfluous for several years, the latter spending almost the time at the hatching house.

Once in three days the trays containing the eggs are taken from the troughs and the poor ones taken out. These are white, hence distinguished.

The work of packing will commence about the 16th of January. The method of doing this has changed Formerly the eggs were transported in tin cans, now in wooden trays. These are of two sizes; one size, 3 inches high, 12 inches wide and 5 inches long. The eggs are packed as follows First a layer of bog moss, wet with water, the same temperature as in the hatching troughs, then the moss is covered with a piece of netting upon which a layer of eggs, say 2 500 is laid. Several of these trays are filled, fastened together and placed in a box large enough for an area of 4 inches all round. This is filled with dry leaves, thus keeping the temperature about the same as when the eggs were in the troughs.

The novelties are two. At the hatching house can be seen several thousand eggs a cross between the brook and salmon trout These are developing finely Mr Partridge has received from Prof Baird 2 "German Carp," probably the first ever brought to Maine The fish resemble the quiver in shape, less bony, grow in length two feet, sometimes, generally about 12 inches One of the best of table fish Product of eggs, occasionally, 700 000 each Domesticated, at home, and fed as chickens These will mostly hatch next fall, if they do Mr Partridge will become a millionaire

OBITUARY

MRS SALLIE LUNT

Mrs Sallie Lunt, widow of the late Deacon Nathaniel Lunt, of Upper Stillwater, died at the residence of her son, Daniel Lunt Dec. 1, 1881, aged eighty-three years She resided for over sixty years at Upper Stillwater, and was buried at that within short distance of the house where she lived in childhood. Five sons survive her Daniel Lunt of Bangor, George Lunt of Orono and Alfred, Jonathan and Richard who are in the West. Mrs. Lunt, or Aunt Sallie, as she was called, was so extensively known and loved that more than the usual notice of her death is due She was a woman of more than common, natural endowments, and had her youth been in these days of education and culture, she would have been equal to any position in the gift of society Blessed with a strong physical constitution, she had endurance suited to the circumstances and toil of her early life, and with endurance was a will and energy equal to any emergency Whatever needed to be done, she found or made a way to do it. She was not simply active, but industrious, never allowing herself to eat the bread of idleness She loved to work, and toil was almost a religious duty as well as pleasure Among those who disturbed her patience most were idle people. She was ambitious making the best of everything and constantly seeking something better, and though limited circumstances she sought the best influences and the best society for herself and hers. She thought every one should make the most of himself and try to be somebody Another trait in her character which caused her to be so much respected, was sincerity She was honest in her opinions and in her deeds, despising all affectation or deception of any kind; sometimes this sincerity caused her to differ from and even offend others, but no one ever doubted her honesty She would not receive or wrong the poorest child She was a woman of large sympathies—suffering, sorrow and want of any kind touched and moved her whole nature. The poor were never turned from her door hungry. She had a hope all word and a helping hand for all in trouble; with her strong will she had a great heart which overflowed She despised meanness. Her positive ardent temperament caused her to be very strong in her likes and dislikes there was no half hearted love While she would not knowingly wrong any human being, yet when honestly she felt they should be condemned, the condemnation was as earnest as the love She was a true, noble mother, if possible, more than most mothers. She lived in the love of her children—they were her earthly idols, she suffered and rejoiced with them But most and best of all, she was a positive earnest, conscientious, believing Christian. To her the Bible meant what it says, to her, Christ was real. She loved those who loved her Lord. The church was sacred to her, she enjoyed its songs, its prayers, all its ordinances, and she lived and died in the sweet hope of the "Life to come." And with all these traits in her character there was a youthfulness, which made her a companion for young people in her declining years. She kept herself in sympathy with them, hence hundreds of hearts will be filled with sweet memories as they think of her warm, earnest, kindly words The world was made better because she lived in it. Thus has gone to her eternal home and reward another of the good "old fashioned" mothers who have made the world richer by their toil their love and their faith SMITH BAKER

A CHILD'S PUZZLES.

BY MRS MARGARET E SANGSTER.

I ray where do the Old Years go, mamma,
When their work is over and done?
Does somebody track them away to sleep,
Out of the sight of the sun?
Or, perhaps, are they all laid quietly
And set away on a shelf
In a beautiful chest behind the theatre,
Each Year in a place by itself?

Was there ever a Year that made us sorry,
And said when its time was by,
'Tis all hard to part—poor old Year,
When the New Y ar comes at the door?
I wish you a happy New Year, mamma—
I am sure new things are slow—
And that one comes with a merry face,
And plenty of snow and ice.

But I only wish I had kept awake
Till the Old Year made his bow,
For what he said when the clock struck twelve
I never shall find out now.
Do you think he was tired and glad to rest?
Do you think it is he and the Year
Or melted away alone in the dark,
Without so much as a sigh?

Do I bother you now? Must I run away?
Why, that's what you always do.
The New Year is just the same as the Old,
I'm quite well enough to play.
Oh, look at those sparrows on yon and spry!
They are waiting to get their crumbs,
Is the New Year's sake they shall have some cake,
And I hope they'll fight for the plums.

CHILDREN'S DROLLERIES.

[From Chamber's Journal.]

No long ago since a correspondent sent to a provincial paper an anecdote of which his six year old boy was the hero. He says:

I keep a shop and sell fancy goods. A gentleman came in to buy something. He was early, and my little boy and I were alone in the house at the time. The gentleman gave me a sovereign, and I had to go upstairs for the cash box. Before doing so, I went into the little room adjoining the shop and said to the boy, 'Watch the gentleman, that he don't steal anything.' and I put him on the counter. He soon was frightened in sang out (Pa, he didn't steal anything—I watched him.) You may imagine what a position I was in.'

Children's questions are often no less embarrassing than they are amusing, as may be instanced in the story of the intelligent little boy who overheard a conversation respecting a wedding that was soon to take place. After breakfast, he entertaining he troubled the subject by asking the following question "Papa, what do they want to give the bride away for? Can't they sell her?"

At a whole exhibition, a youngster is said to have asked his mamma if the whale that swallowed Jonah had as large a mouth as the one before them, why he didn't Jonah walk out at one corner.

"You must think Jonah was a fool, he didn't wan to walk out and get drowned," was the quick reply of a younger brother. Later, the mother could not resist the temptation of spoiling the story.

It is related of a spoiled infant daughter who was looking with great interest at a burning pair of tongs, that it suddenly extinguished, "Mamma, I wish you'd get the tongs cool." "Where do you get your ideas?" was the answer. "Out of my head, sir!" is the reply, in which the mind of tears had suddenly taken a decided turn, the storm broke out. "Mamma, do the clouds have to be sprinkled?"

On seeing a house being whitewashed, a small boy of three wanted to know if the house was going to be shaved. A lady, when admiring the stars on a bright night in a tropical country, was suddenly asked in the most innocent way by her little son of two years old if those were the ones that help the moon.

A boy who had always refused to eat oatmeal, in spite of his mother's hurting that it was a strengthening food, at last surprised her one morning by eating a little and pleasantly and calling for more. Upon his mother asking for an explana for, he replied "I am bound to eat oatmeal till I am strong enough to whip Jenny Scott."

Little Freddie, when visiting a neighbor's house was offered a piece of bread and butter which he declined, but without any show of gratitude. "What do you say, Freddy?" hinted the lady, expecting that to say "I think you." I say it ain't cake," was the impolite response.

The father of a family after reading from the morning paper that, the cold the night before was intense, the thermometer stood at many degrees below freezing point said "Now, child" I suppose you are taught all about hot at school. Which of you can tell me what the freezing point is?" "The point of my nose, papa was the prompt reply from one of the youngsters.

A gentleman somewhat advanced in life, and who was never remarkable for his good looks asked his grandchild what he thought of him. The boy's parents were present. The youngster made no reply

"Well, why won't you tell the what you think of me?" "Cause I don't want to get licked" was the answer.

A mother once showed her child a beautiful picture of John of Gaunt and colors. She said, "Here's been very good, and Heaven always rewards the good by making them beautiful." "Oh!" said the child thinking as children, "don't believe that, mamma. This little set is the kind with much because he is all lipped up, but I'm be could only prove you dare!"

The following remark of a little girl shows appreciation of her elders the reverse of flattering. "O dear!" she exclaimed to her doll. "I do wish you would sit still. I never saw such an active body in all my life. Why don't you act like grown folks, and be still and stupid for a while?"
